General Information

Description

Students will learn applicable skills including, but not limited to self-care & growth, relationship-building with impactful individuals, child care, time & money management, goal orientation, as well as health and wellness. Through this class, students will not only learn key aspects of healthy and responsible living but be able to apply these aspects to becoming honest, empathetic citizens. Social dispositions will also be introduced one week at a time to build higher-character individuals.

Expectations and Goals

Students will be expected to be attentive and engaged on a daily basis. There will be work to be done via handouts and worksheets daily, however, if total class participation numbers are high, there will be less homework for students. Typical classroom etiquette will be required of all students, as well as an open-minded and respectful atmosphere for peers and oneself.

Any student found being disrespectful to a peer, instructor, or themselves will be subject to severe consequences. Not only is this a zero-tolerance, bully-free classroom, but it is a learning environment in which we encourage the learning of others.
